

In 1993 it's Day 6 of the famous leukaemia trial, Reay and Hope vs. BNFL, in the High Court in London. Stephen Jones, corporate adviser to BNFL, is in the witness box explaining a graph of Plutonium and Uranium deposition from Sellafield. For a moment attention centres on a peak value centred on the plant.
